

Banking and finance

Hill Dickinson's team of banking and finance lawyers provides commercially focused legal advice on a variety of banking and finance matters

We understand that to be effective legal advisers, sound market knowledge and a proactive approach to problem solving are essential to help clients achieve their goals.

Why work with Hill Dickinson?

We have a strong track record in advising on matters as diverse as putting in place standby loan facilities for NHS foundation trusts to financing Public Private Partnership (PPP) and Private Finance Initiative (PFI) schemes and asset-backed projects.

We have worked in large and complex projects in most of the major sectors including health, education, defence, leisure, and social housing. We also advise on the banking and finance issues arising from the achievement of foundation trust status.

Tackling the issues

We can provide support to you on a wide range of issues including:

- Loan facilities and security documentation
- All types of asset finance
- Hire purchase documentation
- Financing PPP and PFI schemes
- Stand-alone property finance
- Development finance
- Preparing guarantees and warranties

Case study

Hill Dickinson was instructed by an NHS trust to review and negotiate documentation in relation to a committed working capital facility provided by one of the main clearing banks to the trust. The facility was required for liquidity purposes in preparation for conversion by the trust to foundation trust status.

In addition to work in connection with the loan documentation, Hill Dickinson was required to provide a legal opinion to the bank and advise on conditions precedent to the facility.
