

Charity trustees: training for NHS trust boards

Many NHS trusts hold charitable funds which bring them within the reach of charity legislation and the Charity Commission.

The recent introduction of the International Accounting Standard 27 has brought into sharp focus the need for NHS trusts boards to ensure there is independence in the administration of their exchequer and charitable funds.

To satisfy the requirements of this legislation and the regulating Charity Commission, Hill Dickinson's legal health team is delighted to offer bespoke training for NHS trust boards and members of trust boards who are corporate trustees of a charity, to achieve best practice in discharging their duties as charitable trustees.

This team “always goes the extra mile for clients,” providing informative seminars, weekly updates, bulletins and training.

Comments from previous health training:

“Extremely good seminar, gave me a lot of food for thought”

“A really good session”

“The content and delivery was spot on”

All board members of NHS trusts with charitable funds should undertake training on their duties as charitable trustees, including new trustees or new board members of a trust which is a corporate trustee.

Training packages

Our bespoke training can be tailored to your needs and delivered at a location and time to suit you, or as part of a trust board development day or tabled board meeting.

The training would include:

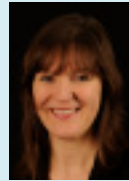

- Induction training for new charitable trustees or new board members where that board acts as corporate trustee of a charitable fund
- Training on charitable trustee duties

In addition, we can also undertake a review of your:

- charitable governing documents;
- charitable policies; and
- charitable trustee induction packs
